Lambda Cycling Foundation Announces First Recipient of Training Grant Tom Rieber Receives Support for Cycling Coach

Wilton Manors, FL, March 5, 2007—Lambda Cycling Foundation, Inc. announced today that their Board of Directors voted to award openly gay cyclist, Tom Rieber, a grant to cover the cost of coaching for the 2007 season. Tom has signed on with renowned cycling coach, Benjamin Sharp, of Cadence Performance Cycling and Multi-Sport Center, located in Philadelphia, Pa. Rieber, a member of the Lambda Cycling Team, took second place in the 2006 CA Elite State Track Championship at the distance of one kilo and was a member of the first place team in the Team Pursuit at the same event. Rieber together with his team, also rode to a 4th place finish in the Team Pursuit at the 2006 Elite Track National Championships.

“I had a very strong 2006, but have reached the point of needing an experienced coach, such as Benjamin, to help me meet my goals for the 2007 season. I’m grateful that the Lambda Cycling Foundation has awarded me this opportunity.” Mr. Rieber went on to list his goals for 2007 which include a California State Championship, Elite Individual Pursuit Podium Finish and qualify for the National Talent Pool.

Lambda Cycling Foundation’s Executive Director, David Richwine, added “2006, LCF’s first year was tremendously successful with our riders winning several individual as well as team medals at both the Gay Games in Chicago and the OUT Games in Montreal. The prospect for 2007 is even more exciting as we look to add more openly gay and lesbian riders to our team, and compete in both national and international races, this will show how truly competitive our riders are when matched against the best in their events”.

ABOUT LAMBDA CYCLING FOUNDATION:

LCF is a non-profit bicycle-racing club with the mission of promoting the positive tenets of sportsmanship and team spirit and to serve as a light for the lesbian and gay community seeking positive role models and strong self-esteem. LCF seeks to achieve this mission by building its team of riders, winning team and individual bicycle racing events, and promoting the sponsors that embody similar positive tenets. LCF offers support to gay and lesbian bicycle racers licensed in any category by their national governing body (USCF in USA), who wish to achieve their highest goals in the sport.
